

Patsy Sciutto Doerr is an award-winning thought leader, speaker and practitioner. Focusing on Social and Community Impact, she has expertise in diversity & inclusion, corporate responsibility, and ESG/sustainability. Her greatest passion is helping organizations build and develop initiatives that best position them for long-term success in a diverse, global environment. Her commitment to change and cultural impact has allowed her work to be featured in several publications and conferences including Forbes, The Hill, The Muse, Milken Institute and Sustainable Brands.

Patsy's impact and success are rooted in more than 25 years of experience building and leading functions for organizations in the financial services, banking and non-profit arenas. Before starting Change for Social Good LLC, she was the Chief ESG and People Officer at UDR, a leading multi family real estate investment trust. Prior to her position at UDR, she served as CEO of The Association of Junior Leagues International, Inc. and as global head of Diversity and Inclusion at Credit Suisse, respectively. Before assuming this position, she was responsible for building and leading Thomson Reuters' diversity and inclusion, corporate responsibility and ESG/sustainability functions. In this capacity, she successfully launched the ESG Institute, a cutting-edge resource and support center tasked with building awareness and understanding around Social Impact issues and metrics. She was also a brand ambassador for Thomson Reuters, frequently speaking externally on social impact issues. And previously, Patsy held leadership roles in human capital and talent management at Deutsche Bank and JP Morgan globally.

The strength of Patsy's experience and impact has made her a regular on the speaking and media circuits. Additionally, Patsy serves on several boards that aid in the advancement of women in developing markets as well as diversity, inclusion and education.
